

the western addition

these eyeglasses they wear the same eyeglasses can they sing in unison can they sing on Unisom the sculpture's smooth surface a personified temperance she is the patron saint of scholars he is the salesman of eyeglasses these eyeglasses they wear the same eyeglasses i can still see the white eyes through the rose of your glasses it is easy to be left out of a conversation about exclusion who can make the distinction between life's necessities and your gluttony

if you stand in the rain long enough you will learn what it is to be lost there are places in the world where you see that this is nothing to be proud of when all your money is used up buying drinks for everyone who you love people bed down with all of the wrong people who can't listen to anyone but themselves when they are all alone because they can't bake a cake on their own new shoes won't help when your feet are too small to walk in somebody else's place that has all of the experience that you lack

1. 11:23

2. 5:56

3. 3:21

4. 4:44 5. 6:46 6. 3:45 7. 2:30

8. 5:17

9. 3:03

10. 7:43

the western addition

recorded at The Basement on four tracks in 2002, remastered September, 2008 all songs © morgan riccilli slade, 2002 if you lived here you would be home by now bedsided

patron saint of scholars begin with a and add

the apologist

thank you for taking time out to play the vibes sitting at the table, eating and watching the clock compensating for the inaccuracy of your vision for the future raining house

it is easy to be left out of a conversation about exclusion